
Diurnal Heterothermy Nightjar Caprimulgus Europaeus L

diurnal body temperature patterns in free-ranging ... - 1 diurnal body temperature patterns in free-ranging populations of two southern african arid-zone nightjars ryan s. o"connor dst-nrf centre of excellence at the percy fitzpatrick institute, department of zoology variation in avian plasma proteins - sora.unm - the diurnal heterothermy of the nightjar (caprimulgus europaeus l.) ann. acad. sci. fennicae lol:l-35. peiponen, v. a., and a. bosley. 1964. torpidity in a captive european nightjar (caprimulgus europam l.) ornis fennica 41:40-42. accepted for publication 3 april 1970. 1967 the nest was occupied by a pair of dippers with two chicks, all of which i banded. possibly as a result of this ... torpor in dark times: patterns of heterothermy are ... - thermy in a small diurnal bird under conditions of varying foraging success. their model predicts that nocturnal heterothermy should increase as diurnal foraging success decreases. logically, this prediction should be easily generalized to account for species with different foraging behaviors and activity cycles. for example, birds and mammals that rely on visual cues for detecting prey at ... in dark times: the lunar cycle predicts heterothermy in a ... - heterothermy was strongly related to variation in foraging opportunities associated with the lunar cycle, even though food abundance appeared to remain relatively high throughout the study period. progenicide in double-crested cormorants - the song of the eurasian nightjar (caprimulgus europaeus) is a loud, low-pitched trill comprised of 25 to 40 pulses of sound per second. nightjars can sing for several minutes during which the interval between pulses never exceeds 40 ms. this presents two complementary problems: (1) how do the birds get enough ... seasonal use of torpor by free-ranging australian owlet ... - the most common pattern of heterothermy known to occur in diurnal birds is termed "nocturnal hypothermia," which consists of a lowering of body temperature by about 57c and an energy-based body temperature threshold between torpor ... - b data for each nightjar, using the shape of the upper half of the distribution (i.e., values greater than the upper modal peak) to infer the shape of the lower half.
